Taking care of your money can be a real challenge. Fortunately, there are more tools available to help you stay on track than ever before. Buying a home is a significant financial milestone and a personal achievement that’s definitely worthy of celebration. The path to homeownership looks different for every person, though, and there are various ways you can go about purchasing a home. Going into business for yourself is an American tradition as old as the nation. If you have an entrepreneurial bent, chances are, you’ve considered starting a business. Since the economic recovery from the recession of 2008, millions of Americans have started their own ventures. As the year draws to a close, people often start taking stock of their finances. Making a plan for getting your finances in shape is a great way to start off the new year. Smart money management requires more than just paying bills on time. Is a partnership right for your business? What’s required to form a partnership? Do you need to sign a partnership agreement? You’ll find answers to these and other questions here. A partnership is legally simple to create. You may regret it down the road if you don’t plan your business venture carefully. Partnerships bring the best of two people together to create something much bigger than each could have accomplished alone. Next on digital’s acquisition list: Paper these days, we’ve got digital signatures, digital music and even digital dogs. How pairing up can pay off are you considering a partnership but you’re not sure if it’s financially advisable? Here are three ways a partnership can benefit your business. Equity partners have an ownership interest in the business and have a right to receive distributions from the business. Fda engages in partnerships with foreign governments, regulatory coalitions, development organizations, academic institutions, among others. The.gov means it’s official.federal government websites often end in.gov or.mil.